The 19th Annual Eagle Rock Music Festival transformed Colorado Boulevard (into a hall of music, food, local art and vintage clothing Oct. 6. The event was presented by Coordinator Jean Haruns and produced by the Center of the Arts Eagle Rock. According to Matthew flirting, Festival director and former-director of events at the Center of the Arts Eagle Rock, approximately 30,000 people attended the event and different acts performed at the festival, including Lily West and Super Lux. The event had 12 sponsors, including Onyx Arts and Occidental College, according to the festival’s website.

Occidental’s Coordinator of Community Programs, Alleges Paper, was one of the representatives at the Onyx Arts booth. She said it is important to make sure that, given the college’s position and vision, we [Occidental College] support those who are really underrepresented. Especially when we live in Los Angeles, which is such an incredible and diverse place.

“I think that because Oxy is a part of an institution of higher education, there’s a lot of power and privilege that comes with that,” Papilla said. “It’s really important to make sure that, given the college’s mission and vision, we [Occidental College] support those who are really underrepresented. Especially when we live in Los Angeles, which is such an incredible and diverse place.”